BACKGROUND: In October of 2000 the Traffic Division of the Department of Public Works completed a permit parking evaluation for the Carver Neighborhood. The results at that time determined that the parking congestion in that area was from special events at the Seigel Center, therefore, it was recommended to establish a Residential Permit Parking Program to be enforced during special events. In June of 2001 the Division of Traffic Engineering drafted a position paper that supported the establishment of Permit Parking Programs to meet the needs of conflicting land uses where residential uses are next to intense traffic generators. Ordinance No. 2004-179-175 was adopted June 28, 2004 which changed: (1) the criteria for establishing residential restricted parking programs from minimum of 20 to 10 contiguous blocks faces. (2) Written documentation from a majority of the affected associations representing the properties within the proposed district, and property owners approving of the outlined parking district; provided, however, that where written documentation is submitted indicating that fewer than sixty percent (60%) of the properties within the proposed district are owner-occupied, then such approval shall be required for the majority of the associations and a majority of the occupants of the properties in such proposed district rather than from a majority of the owners in the proposed district. Over the past six years the association and the residents of the Carver Neighborhood have been working to establish a Residential Permit Parking Program. Based on current survey information performed by Lanier Parking Services, between 79% and 100% of the spaces were occupied. Further, anywhere from 40% to 100% of the spaces appeared to be occupied by parkers who were not residents of the neighborhood. Consequently, the survey concludes that the neighborhood has insufficient parking under today's conditions.

FISCAL IMPACT/COST: $91,866. This is the cost of the program for the first year for signage and parking enforcement. The cost of parking enforcement will continue each year.

FISCAL IMPLICATIONS: None

BUDGET AMENDMENT NECESSARY: None

REVENUE TO CITY: The parking enforcement will increase City revenue, however, it can not be determine at this time.

Re: Land Use & Economic Development Implications
Of Implementing a Parking Management District
In Carver Neighborhood

Mr. David J. Wall
Parking Manager
City of Richmond
900 E. Broad St.
Richmond, VA 23220

Dear Mr. Wall:

Lanier Parking Solutions is the City's contractor to manage its on-street parking program. As part of this contract, Lanier provides consulting and planning services associated with the City's parking program.

In our evaluation of the need to implement a Residential Parking Permit Program (RPPP) in the Carver Neighborhood, we determined that there are land use and economic development implications associated with implementing this RPPP.

First, changes in the current land use are exactly the impetus for the increased need for the RPPP:

- Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU) has recently expanded to the north side of Broad Street, without a corresponding growth in parking provided for those facilities. This has placed considerable pressure on the parking in the neighborhood.
- The Siegal Center of the University has created parking demands outside of normal university programs, since it has a wide range of community and university events during normal university operating hours, as well as at nights and on the weekends.
- The revitalization of this area by the university has also created a resurgence in private commercial businesses, some associated with university facilities; some in buildings that were long-time vacant, but have been renovated. Both their employees and customers are using Carver streets.
- Lastly, Carver, like many inner city neighborhoods today, is experiencing renovation and growth, especially in multi-family housing. These units in many cases have their own parking, and yet their residents and visitors prefer to park on-street. This places additional and unanticipated demand on the residential parking in Carver.

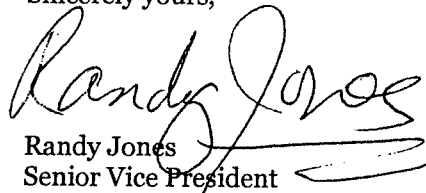

Implementing an RPPP itself has land use and economic development implications:

- The implementation of an RPPP within Carver will protect the current residences in Carver, thus supporting the continued growth and revitalization of Carver.

- New businesses in Carver, specifically those supporting the neighborhood, such as restaurants and neighborhood services, although they would not be eligible for permits, their customers will be able to temporarily park to use those services. Lanier anticipates that the RPPP will assist in the growth and revitalization of business in the Carver neighborhood.

Consequently, Lanier has determined that the RPPP will be a positive benefit to land use and economic development in and adjacent to the Carver Neighborhood.

Sincerely yours,
