City of Richmond, Virginia

Richmond was founded in 1737 by Colonel William Byrd, II. He inherited the former Stegg lands on both sides of the James River from his father and became known himself as the “Father of Richmond”.

He visited Richmond in 1733 and planned to build a city to be called “Richmond”. Four years later, his friend, William Mayo made a map of Richmond and the first lots were sold. There were only 250 people living in Richmond when it became a town in 1742. In May of 1782, about two and a half years after the British surrendered at Yorktown, the General Assembly wanted to meet in a central location, less exposed to British incursions than Williamsburg.

The first self-government was established by the act of incorporation in 1782. Twelve men were to be elected from the City at-large and were to select one of their own to act as Mayor, another to serve as Recorder and four to serve as Aldermen. The remaining six were to serve as members of the Common Council.

The second City Charter of March 1851 stipulated that all city officials had to be elected. This method worked as long as the City was small and most voters knew personally, the qualifications of the men for whom they were voting and the requirements for the jobs to which they were elected.

Under the “strong Mayor” form of Government set forth in the Charter of 1918, the Mayor controlled the administrative policies of the City and was responsible for most of the key appointments. The City’s population grew from 127,989 in 1910 to 171,677 over the next decade. The old custom of electing all officials had become too complex. As a result, a “short ballot” process was adopted and the Mayor was expected to fill the remaining offices with qualified appointees.

In 1948 the City received the Charter which established Richmond's former Council-Manager form of government. The one Chamber council, composed of nine elected members, was the legislative body of the City and had the authority to issue bonds and enact ordinances and resolutions. The position of Mayor, with the exception of some legislative duties, was mainly ceremonial and the majority of the administrative and appointment responsibilities were transferred to the City Manager.

The Council was given the authority to appoint the City Manager, the School and Library Boards, Trustees of the Retirement System, the City Attorney, the City Clerk, the City Auditor, the City Assessor, the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority and various boards and commissions.

The School Board was responsible for the City's educational system. The Board appointed the Superintendent and had its own administrative organization which was headed by the School Board with assistants to the Superintendent. School Administration was responsible for hiring teachers, providing teaching materials, the review and evaluation of school programs, student testing and the maintenance of school building inventory.

As the City's Chief Executive Officer, the City Manager attended all meetings of the City Council. He was required to keep the Council apprised of the financial conditions, future needs and other administrative issues. He was also required to prepare and submit an annual budget to City Council for approval. In addition, the City's Manager had a mandate to provide the Council with a comprehensive report detailing the financial transactions and administrative functions of the City Government.

A NEW GOVERNMENT STRUCTURE

On January 1, 2005, the City of Richmond began operation under the Mayor-at-large form of government. The Mayor is no longer chosen from among the City's nine elected Councilmembers, but is elected at-large by the citizens of the City. The first elected Mayor under this new structure is the Honorable L. Douglas Wilder. Mayor Wilder is a former Governor of Virginia and the first and only African American to ever be elected Governor in the United States of America. He won the election by an unprecedented 81.61% of the votes cast. He was sworn into office on Sunday, January 2, 2005.
